Come vuoi morire? (Castelvecchi RX) (Italian Edition) Susan Dabbous

Questo libro è il diario di una prigionia, ma anche un inno al coraggio di un popolo, quello siriano, che non ha mai smesso di sperare nonostante l'orrore che gli si consuma intorno. Il 3 aprile del 2013 Susan Dabbous, giornalista di origini siriane, è stata rapita in Siria insieme ad altri tre reporter italiani. A sequestrarli, a Ghassanieh, un villaggio cristiano, è stato Jabhat al-Nusra, un gruppo legato ad al-Qaeda. Sono stati arrestati davanti a una chiesa sconsacrata, dove stavano filmando un documentario per la Rai. Portata inizialmente in una casa prigione, Dabbous è stata poi separata dai suoi colleghi e trasferita in un appartamento con una donna, Miriam, moglie di uno jihadista. È stata la nuova carceriera a occuparsi della "islamizzazione" di Susan. Con lei l'autrice ha pregato e ascoltato i discorsi di Osama bin Laden. Ed è sempre con lei che ha dovuto riflettere su una domanda che in quei giorni di cattività le è stata rivolta: "Qual è la tua morte preferita?". Un quesito cui Dabbous ha tentato di rispondere con sincerità, "perché quando sei un ostaggio non dici bugie. Così ho parlato da donna a donna con quel linguaggio assolutamente universale fatto principalmente di emozioni". La liberazione è arrivata dopo undici giorni, a seguito di un accordo concluso dai servizi segreti italiani. Dopo un breve periodo in Italia, Susan è partita di nuovo per il Libano, dove viveva da oltre un anno, e lì ha scoperto che un suo amico nel villaggio di Atme, in Siria, era stato torturato solo per avere informazioni su di lei.
