Frankly Disillusioned is the crazy, "rats an' all" tale of master magician, Dean Metcalfe and his sometimes hilarious, often chaotic, globetrotting adventures with his glamorous assistant and wife, Claudine. Dean explains with honesty and humour, how his and Claudine's lives turned from a world of dazzling illusions to a world of bitter disillusionment. He candidly tells how their glamorous (?) lifestyle took them at times, to the edge of their endurance and had them dropping through the skies, plunging over ravines and facing the ultimate humiliation at the hands of the British media machine. This must-read book also offers a revealing insight into the secret world of magic and raises a colossal question mark over the curious and intriguing issue of life after death.
