Found roaming on the vast icy plains of the great white circumpolar arctic, the Polar Bear is considered the largest land-living carnivore in the world. Polar Bears have come to the forefront of public attention in recent years due to growing evidence of their diminishing habitat as a result of climate change. Photographed in their natural environment by award-winning photographers, National Geographic Polar Bears 2015 offers a dynamic collection of close-ups of this extraordinary animal. Each outstanding image in this award winning calendar is accompanied by fascinating National Geographic information and a large grid with moon phases and international holidays. Proceeds from the sale of this calendar support vital exploration, conservation, research, and education programs. Earth friendly, printed with soya-based inks on FSC certified paper.
